Explanations for the physician:

If, for health reasons, a student does not appear for an examination or interrupts it, he/she must prove the illness to the chair of examiners in accordance with the examination regulations. For this purpose, the student requires a medical certificate which allows the chair of examiners, on the basis of the information provided by the physician, to answer the legal question of whether the student was unable to take the examination. Please note: The certificate may also be informal as long as it contains the following points.

The physician's explanation:

My investigation today on the question of the above-mentioned patient's inability to take an examination has yielded the following from a medical point of view:

1. symptoms of illness relevant to taking an examination which significantly limit mental or physical performance, such as being bed-ridden or having fever, pain, or concentration problems due to taking medication were present.
2. These are not caused by fluctuations in his/her daily form, exam stress, or the like. (These are not significant impairments in terms of one's ability to take an examination.)

From my medical point of view, there is a considerable impairment of the patient's ability to perform under the terms of point 1.

I expressly confirm that this is not a minimal limitation of performance as described in point 2.

From a medical point of view, the patient is
