

Research Associates' Council

Definition and responsibilities according to the University's Constitution

The elected representatives of the research associates in the Faculty Councils, Senate, University Council, as well as the research associates among the Women's Representatives, members of the Presidential Advisory Committees, and representative of the doctoral researchers within the University of Bayreuth Graduate School form the Research Associates' Council for the exchange of information and the coordination of its committee activities.

The Research Associates' Council appoints the permanent representatives in the various committees at the University who are not settled by way of elections.

In the scope of academic self-government, the Convent represents the interests of mid-level academic staff, e.g. the research associates and instructors for special tasks, regardless of academic degree or type of employment.

Contact

As direct contact persons, the elected representatives are available to the research associates in their faculties at any time. You will find a list of current contact persons and committee representatives by visiting

Mandate at the University

Mid-level academics play an active role in our university's development in committees such as the University Council, the Senate, the Faculty Councils, and the Presidential Advisory Committee for

- Research & Junior Researchers
- Teaching & Learning
- Teacher Education
- International Affairs
- Student Fees
- Information & Communication Technology
- Equal Opportunities & Diversity Management

The Convent is a hub for all information relevant to mid-level academic staff.

It offers a platform for regularly exchanging information, including details on

- general requirements and development potential at the University
- Science & Teaching
- Funding for early-career scholars

The first part of the meetings are generally open to the public; each and every mid-level academic staff member is welcome to attend.

Come get involved in academic self-government—the Convent looks forward to meeting you and hearing about your ideas!
